With regard to Docket ## 175 and 176, the process is better for everyone if a full conversation can be had on all outstanding issues before a party sends the Court a letter. Please try consulting again — and by telephone, not email, as much as possible.

Accordingly, the application in Docket # 175 is denied without prejudice to another effort to comply with paragraph 2.A of the Court's Individual Practices. The Court would be much happier with a joint letter that lists each issue and each side's position — but compliance with 2.A is sufficient.

Certainly, the consultation process should not be unnecessarily drawn out. The Court would expect that a week or two would be more than sufficient to have a full consultation, though appropriate accommodation should be made for health-related impediments.

SO ORDERED.
